Noism

In this document I will propose my theory of noism (from the word no and ism), according to which nothing exists at all.

My argument for this view is simple:

P1: if reality existed, there would have to be an explanation for why reality exists.
P2: that explanation would have to be based on something outside of reality in order to explain reality's existence, since nothing can be the explanation of its own existence.
P3: however, nothing exists outside of reality, which is existence itself.
P4: therefore, there can't be a logical explanation for reality.
P5: therefore, reality makes no sense.
P6: therefore, reality doesn't exist. Nothing exists.

I will name this argument the tipotic argument (from the Greek word for nothing, tipota τίποτα).
